Anthropological Perspectives on Eastern Europe and Russia after the Cold War

Spring 2019

MWF 8

Prof. Maria Stoilkova

Center for European Studies, UF

This course looks at the societies of Eastern Europe and Russia amid swift and momentous social change. It has been over 20 years since the collapse of communism in this region of the world and larger part of Eastern Europe today is part of the European bloc. Yet the legacies of the communist past and countries' entanglements with their former satellite Russia make the outcomes of the postsocialist transformations far from clear or complete. The course begins with a review of some of the major political and social developments in the world during and after the Cold War and gives students an opportunity to raise principal questions about capitalism, socialism, development, and our “common global future”. We move then to explore anthropological accounts of the daily lives of people, and how citizens of Eastern Europe and Russia struggled to redefine their experiences since the 1990s in light of the new democratic institutions and the new logic of economic and social life shaped under capitalist realities. Readings and discussions will focus on the contradictions, paradoxes and ambiguities of postsocialism by looking closely at emerging forms of nationalism, gender relations, language use, production and consumption, identification with place, and new assumptions about identity, memory, personhood and nation.

We ask, why do so many Eastern Europeans today feel increasingly distrustful of politics, capitalism and globalization more broadly? Why are they increasingly nostalgic for a period that has been described as one the worst “totalitarian experiments” in Europe? Is the attempt of bringing Eastern Europe within the orbit of democracy and market economy a unique “post-socialist” experience; or is it part of a broader reorganization of the world in which developments in Eastern Europe may be seen as related to experiences in other parts of the world?

The materials for this course draw on recent ethnographic writing on the topic, historical accounts, as well film and fiction writing, with the aim of providing a more balanced picture of the various responses – academic, journalistic as well as artistic – to postsocialism.

At the end of the course, students should be acquainted with

- academic and public debates about the postsocialist/transitioning states in Europe
- nuanced knowledge (historical and socio-political) of particular countries in the region
- theoretical and ethical perspectives on social change, globalization, human rights, social movements, and the ethics and analytics of everyday life

Course Format

The course will consist of lectures, discussions and in-class activities, including student presentations and screenings of films and documentaries. The instructor will deliver lectures geared toward providing (historically, politically, and theoretically) contextualizing information that supplements readings. The purpose of lectures will be to review the major conceptual points of each new topic and to integrate the material students are reading or viewing.

Students are expected to attend each class and to have completed assigned readings – ahead of the meeting, so that we can use class meetings to discuss points of particular interest or difficulty and to move beyond the information presented in the texts. There also will be screenings of films and some documentaries, aimed at “visualizing” some of the main debates and representations of Eastern Europe today. Screenings are announced in advance and will be shown during the 2-hour time slots of the class. The visual material is an essential part of course and students are required to attend screenings.

Course Requirements and Grading

Materials for this class will be generally available in electronic format via E-learning.

Articles from academic journals are accessible through the UF electronic database on the UF library web page. Students are expected to retrieve these articles themselves. Should you need help using the web page, please consult a librarian.

Some of the pieces might be also available through a general google search on the internet.

Your final grade has three components: a discussion participation grade (10 %); an in-class presentation (30 %); 4 short quizzes (20 %); one reaction paper (40%).

Alternatively, you may choose to white a research paper on topic of your choice (60%).

The course is designed so as to help students to formulate and express their own ideas on the themes taken up.

Therefore, discussion is an integral component of the course, and 10% of the grade will be based on participation in class discussions.

Students will also be expected to give in-class presentations, which fulfills another 30% of their final grade. The in-class presentation is a summary of an assigned article from the weekly class readings (about. 10-15 min). To facilitate a discussion on the reading the student presenting + 3 other students will be responsible to frame questions on the presented material.

There will be 4 unannounced quizzes (5 questions each), based on course readings and class discussion and lectures. The format will be a combination of short answer, multiple choice or fill in the blank questions. These will not be difficult, but they are intended to test whether you have done the readings, paid attention, and are prepared for class. Together these will constitute 30% of your grade.

The remaining 40% of the class grade will be based on the preparation of one short reaction papers (3-4 pages, font 12, double-spaced) responding to class material, typed up and turned in, as scheduled in the syllabus. The reaction paper address at least 3 readings (articles or chapters from books as listed in the syllabus).

Alternatively, students may also choose to work on a research project of their own. Please consult the topic with the instructor prior to the deadline for the first assignment, when you will have to submit a preliminary outline and a short bibliography.

Grading scale: A (90-100), A- (87-89), B+ (84-86), B (80- 83), B- (77-79), C+ (74-76), C (70-73), C- (67-69), D+ (64-66), D (60-63), D- (57-59), E (<57).

Academic Integrity

Academic honesty is not only an ethical issue but also the foundation of scholarship. Cheating and plagiarism are therefore serious breaches of academic integrity. Documented plagiarism of a paper will be given a “D” in instances of one or two sentences, and an “F” in more severe cases, and no revision will be allowed in either instance.
