Jewish History from the Spanish Expulsion to the Eve of the Enlightenment

This course will survey major trends in Jewish society from the break-up of the medieval world to the emergence of a new order in 18th century Europe. We will trace the transition of Jewish society towards modernity by following the varieties of cultural, social, and religious life among communities of Jewish exiles from Spain from 1492 through the early 18th century. Prerequisites: None.

Required Books: The following book is required for this course. It is available through various online distributors or directly through the press's website.

Lawrence Fine, Judaism in Practice: From the Middle Ages through the Early Modern Period (Princeton University Press, 2001)

What is expected of you:

a) Reading: I strongly recommend that you complete each reading assignment before the class session and be ready to discuss the themes and substance of the assignments. Lectures and discussions will be more engaging and productive for you if you have a formal point of reference. Please bring all assigned primary source readings to class on the day for which the reading has been assigned (i.e., internet sources and handouts, etc.). We will not always discuss all of the readings directly. However, these readings were selected to provide you with a foundation for the material and issues covered and you will be responsible for all readings. You are strongly encouraged to bring questions about the readings to class – if one of you had questions or difficulties, others certainly did as well.

b) Attendance: You are responsible for all the material included in the readings as well as the material covered in lectures. It is expected that you will be present at all class sessions unless unavoidable circumstances make attendance impossible. If you must miss a class, please make arrangements with another student to get notes. But remember: if you miss a substantial number of classes, your participation grade will suffer proportionately. You will be permitted three absences over the course of the term; every unexcused absence thereafter will lower your grade by one third. Guidelines for excused absences can be found here: https://catalog.ufl.edu/ugrad/1617/regulations/info/attendance.aspx#absences. Also, as a courtesy to me and to your fellow students, please turn off your cell phones before class begins and refrain from checking them during class. Obsessive attention to cell phones distracts your instructor and your colleagues. If ringing cell phones and persistent texting become a problem, the owners of those phones will be asked to leave the class and their absence subsequent will count as

c) Written assignments: Historical writing demands that you make your arguments in a clear and precise manner and that you back them up with historical evidence. Thus, written assignments will be graded on the basis of style as well as content. Completion of the written assignments is absolutely required. Late assignments will not be accepted without penalty. Please make every effort to apprise me of adverse circumstances that affect your ability to attend class or complete assignments on time. Official documentation is required to excuse an absence and to schedule make-up assignments. Do not submit your work to via email – unless I tell you otherwise, written work must be presented in hard-copy.

d) Course Requirements: i) Two exams, the first worth 20% and the second worth 25% of your final grade. ii) Two short text analyses, due on 22 September and 17 November, the first is worth 20% and the second is worth 25% of your final grade. I will be happy to read and comment on all written assignments prior to the due date; just be sure to give me enough time to read your work carefully and get it back to you in time for you to implement changes. iii) Participation in class discussions, worth 10%. By participation, I mean active and attentive engagement with the course material. Ideally, it also means contribution to in class discussion, including asking questions. Coming to class and sleeping through the lecture, for example, is not considered productive participation.
