Course Description

This course focuses primarily on six Hollywood westerns, released from 1956 through 2005, which consider racial identities and race conflict, gender roles and sexual behaviors, and major events in U.S. society—and to a lesser extent on four recent television/streaming series (Deadwood, Dr. Quin Medicine Woman, Justified, and Longmire) that have adapted the conventions of the western into a new format. The first film we will discuss is John Ford’s The Searchers (1956), a classic historical western; then we will look to contemporary westerns that use romantic relationships that cross either racial or gender boundaries to capture the impact that history has had on individuals and society. The first contemporary western we will examine is Thunderheart (Michael Apted, 1992), a fictionalized treatment of the American Indian Movement’s involvement on the Pine Ridge Reservation of the 1970s, comparing it to a documentary, Incident at Oglala (Apted, 1992) that the same director made about the same subject. Then we will examine three films that challenge, not always successfully, the trope of white saviors, analyzing Lone Star (John Sayles, 1996), which is set in the 1990s but uses flashbacks to reflect on the 1960s through the trope of an inter-racial romance between an Anglo sheriff and a Chicana schoolteacher; Thelma & Louise (Ridley Scott, 1991), a film that is infused with a sensibility made possible by second-wave feminism; and Brokeback Mountain (Ang Lee, 2005), which is also set in the 1960s, but which explores homophobia—both internalized and external variants. The last Hollywood film we will study is Smoke Signals (Chris Eyre, 1998), a film made by native-American director (Chris Eyre) and script writer (Sherman Alexie) that directly challenges Hollywood’s racial constructions of the Indian and “official” versions of U.S. history.

Students will learn how to situate these Hollywood westerns in various historical contexts so as to speculate about how they were understood by audiences at their original release dates, along with what meanings these texts may hold for us today. One of our central concerns will be to ask whether the meanings of these films have changed over time—taking us into the thorny area of how best to interpret cultural texts that are produced in one historical moment (about another historical moment) but continue to circulate in a third historical moment.

We will also discuss what makes a Hollywood film or a television series “good” from a historical, as opposed to aesthetic, perspective. Is it some correspondence/affirmation of an already-known past, or an ability to offer new insights and perspectives about history? Is it because the film lends itself to competing interpretations or generates meaningful reflection? Or perhaps the historical value of a film lies elsewhere—in the way it changes our understanding of both past and present, as well as how we think about the possibilities for the future.

Course Objectives

- To gain an appreciation for how film and television westerns draw on popular ideologies to shape our understanding of both past and present
- To complicate conventional understandings of truth, objectivity, causality, reality, facts, evidence, etc.
- To make students better readers and interpreters of cultural texts, especially those texts that purport to be “based on a true story” or offer insight into history
- To further develop students’ critical reading, writing, and thinking skills

Required Readings

Policies and expectations

- Format: This course meets two times a week and will be conducted in a mixed lecture-workshop-seminar format.

- Attendance: Because so much of the course depends on in-class exercises, discussions, and presentations, students’ attendance at every scheduled class session is critical. 100 points are allocated to attendance. If you have one absence, you will receive 90 of these 100 points, 2 absences 80 points, 3 absences 70 points. If you are absent more than three times, then you will receive 0 points out of the 100 allocated for attendance, and additional penalties may be applied. If you have five or more absences, you will be asked to withdraw from the course or risk a failing grade.
• Preparation: Students are expected to have completed all reading and writing assignments by the beginning of class on the date specified on the syllabus. Whenever possible, students should bring hard copies of the required readings to class. Students who come to class unprepared to discuss the readings, i.e. without notes, or without the assignments that are due that day, may be dismissed from class and counted as absent.

• General Courtesy: Please do not come late to class or leave early. If there are special circumstances that prevent you from being on time, or staying throughout the time period, please let the instructor know in advance of class.

• Late work will not be accepted unless there are exceptional circumstances beyond the student’s control. Please let the instructor know of any adverse circumstances that may affect your ability to complete assignments on time.

• Special Accommodations: Students needing special accommodations must register with the Dean of Students Office (http://www.dso.ufl.edu/drc during the first week of the semester) and have that office communicate with the instructor.

• Course Evaluations: Students in this class are participating in the pilot evaluation of the new course evaluation system called GatorEvals. The new evaluation system is designed to be more informative to instructors so that teaching effectiveness is enhanced and to be more seamlessly linked to UF’s CANVAS learning management system. Students can complete their evaluations through the email they receive from GatorEvals, in their Canvas course menu under GatorEvals, or via https://urldefense.proofpoint.com/v2/url?u=https-3A__ufl.bluera.com_ufl &d=DwIGaQ&c=sJ6xIWyx-zLMB3EPkvcnVg&r=1qtWVKU2uNohMAWR5pYYVu0F_ty9jxk4wl-DCsEFmKub76k8eaDIyGQkZMpCQZ6&m=KCQMaruvDccGkQ95LBWWejChKpHp30lzGps63zo0Ao&s=2ry1lk1Sd2MT9xMTXgagRsioOlmzE7-Mky8W2E_HU03wQ&e= Please note your other classes this semester may be evaluated in the current GatorRater online evaluation system at https://evaluations.ufl.edu. Thank you for serving as a partner in this important effort.

All students should observe the University of Florida's standards of academic honesty. https://sccr.dso.ufl.edu/policies/student-honor-code-student-conduct-code/

Acts of dishonesty, cheating and plagiarism include (but are not limited to) the following:

• Turning in a paper that was written by someone else or written by you for another course.

• Copying or paraphrasing a portion of text from the work of another author without using quotation marks and acknowledging the source through a commonly accepted style of footnoting
• Using a unique idea or concept, which you discovered in a specific reading, website, blog, discussion board, etc., without acknowledging the original author and source, both within the text and by using a commonly accepted style of footnoting.
