UNPUBLISHED REPORTS

Marsiglio, William. Men's involvement with nonbiological children: The "stepfather" project submitted to the National Center on Fathers and Families, University of Pennsylvania and the Annie Casey Foundation, May, 2002, pp. 87.

PROJECTS IN PROGRESS

Kids Who Tri. Book project based on field research and qualitative interviews with USA Triathlon staff, race directors, coaches, parents, and youth triathletes from around the country. The book explores the experiences of those most directly involved with the youth triathlon community. It highlights how youth triathlon is an emerging sport that both challenges and reinforces different aspects of the 21st century model of youth sports in the United States.

Chasing We-ness: The Purpose and Power of Bonding. This book project is in the early development stage and will focus on the process of how individuals develop and sustain a sense of we-ness (affinity for a shared identity with another person/persons) in contemporary American society.

Men Stepping Up: Creating the Mindful Journey to Nurture Kids. This book project will build on a conceptual model I'm developing that highlights the social forces that shape men's tendencies to express a nurturing orientation toward children

Jeffries, William, Tunalilar, Ozcan, Marsiglio, William, and Dana Berkowitz. Temporal changes in fatherhood desires among heterosexual, gay, and bisexual men, United States—2002-2015.
