COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course is about the development, analysis and treatment of social problems. This class not only focuses on issues within the United States, but also discusses social problems outside the country and their influences to the world. During this class we will discuss current social problems, what attributes to those problems, what methods are used to study these problems and how sociology can help you discover ways to understand, explore and make a difference in the world around you. Class combines videos and online activities. Course assignments include: quizzes, online discussions, historical analysis papers (HAPs), and a finial exam. (S)

(S) = Social and Behavioral Sciences

PURPOSE OF COURSE: To reach understandings of current social problems in United States as well as all over the world.
COURSE OBJECTIVES:

• Identify essential elements and learn descriptive information about social problems.

• Examine how macro and micro level structures influence social issues from a sociological perspective.

• Identify and interpret the different approaches to studying social problems.

• Apply different sociological perspectives and use empirical data to construct the research evidence of the social problems.

• Be able to analyze social problems from a global perspective.

• Evaluate the credibility of the evidence supporting claims of social problems and the fit of a social policy intended to resolve a social problem.

• Evaluate the quality of institutions and NGOs based on their efficiency of problem solving.

• Effectively communicate in writing through discussions and assignments.

TEACHING PHILOSOPHY: My philosophy of the teaching and learning experience is also an interactive one. This is your class rather than mine. I expect each of you to contribute to this learning experience through online activities. I will not be feeding you facts that you will then regurgitate. Instead, ideas will be presented and we will all challenge ourselves to think critically about these ideas by analyzing real-life examples. The format of this class includes videos and online discussions. I expect everyone to contribute to the teaching and learning experience in the next few months, so if you come across something outside of class that you think is relevant to what we have been discussing, please bring it to discussion forums and share with the rest of us or discuss it in your assignments. You are strongly recommended to participate in campus & community events related to the issues we discuss in class; I challenge you to step outside of your comfort zone as you think critically and innovatively to solve problems locally and around the world.

INSTRUCTIONAL METHODS: This course is divided into weeks on particular themes.

You will need to review several online videos, complete the assigned reading (1-2 chapters) and review the associated ppt slides. When you have mastered the material for the week, you will be best able to complete the quiz and participate actively in the discussion forums.
COURSE POLICIES

READING QUIZZES: You need to take a brief quiz on the readings for that week. Normally this will consist of ten questions. The quizzes will focus on the main points of each reading rather than minor details. Quizzes must be completed within 15 minutes. You will only have one attempt to each quiz. Quizzes must be completed by Thursday evening (11:55 pm) of the week in which they are due. Make-up quizzes will not be given.

ONLINE DISCUSSIONS: You will find 1-2 questions (in each week’s module) that should be answered and discussed. The discussion involves writing at minimum 200 words for your own post to the board (see rubric). You are also required to provide comprehensive responses to at least two other students’ posts each week.

Materials can be viewed and discussion forums can be completed any time during the week but must be completed by Thursday evening (11:55 pm) and responses to other’s posts must be completed by Sunday evening (11:55 pm) of the week in which they are due.

HISTORICAL ANALYSIS PAPERS: You are required to submit 3 historical analysis papers (HAPs) throughout the semester. Each of the 3 HAPs has a deadline and need to be submitted on Canvas no later than the due, or you will receive a 0 (zero) for each analysis paper that is missed.

FINAL EXAM: There is a cumulative final exam. You are required to complete a 50 question final exam online as scheduled with ProcterU. The final exam must be completed within 90 minutes. The exam will be available during Week 15 and must be completed between April 20-22.

SPECIFIC DATES FOR TERM PROJECT AND EXAMS APPEAR BELOW.
